

Rosemary Metzler
Robert Terwilleger
Deanne Davila
Leonard Sapienza
(not pictured)

E N G L I S H

Hands so lovely, we bet you can't tell which one is the teacher.

In the beginning, man got along just fine writing on his cave walls and pantomiming his conversation with his neighbor. But now that we are more civilized than the cave man we must use words and use them correctly. The English classes here at DCHS do just that. Aside from learning or relearning our English grammar, we also learn to read intellectual, as well as interesting novels.

So, by the time we leave the sacred halls of DCHS, we should be better off than that poor, uncivilized, not-a-care-in-the-world, cave man and be an intelligent, ulcerous, and ready for the world, couth. Thanks a lot, teachers, you'll never know how much we appreciate it.

Who will claim this class of second rate artists? Miss Peck?

Oh, what a class of sedate seniors.

